Low Rates of Exchange Said to Be Attracting Outside Capitalists.

BERLIN, March 11.-Subscriptions for the new war loan are being received on a considerable scale from the neutral countries. Foreign investors were virtually unrepresented in the first war loan, but the low rates of German exchange now prevailing apparently have attracted outside capi talists, who seem to see an opportunity to realize large returns by buying when money is cheap and selling at profit when normal rates of exchange are restored at the conclusion of Bankers report that more large subscriptions for the loan are coming in than was the case in September, and that the falling off of the small subscriptions is due to the little investors apparently having put most of their savings in the first loan.
